

Creating a MySpace Account for a Fictional Character

- Pick a character for the play that interests you. For a challenge pick a character that is of the opposite sex.
- Knowing what you have read about this person, create an account using your email address. Consider these elements:
  - Color Schemes
  - Layout (check out <http://www.myspacegeeks.com/myspace-layouts/>)
  - Genre sections (i.e. Favorite music, Friends, About me, Profiles, etc.)
- Invite other characters to be friends with you.
- Write on another character's page.

Just some general stuff I'm about 2 finish College for Bussines and Commerce (I only have to write my degree), I'm also very active in student's life and different non-government organisations (organisations that work for students and and young people), a former member of the 5 member executive board. Currently incharge of running the office and coordination.

pust 2008

I also work for the youth centre in our town. I do a lot of designin for the centre, from posters, flyers, small brochures and stuff like that. I also work on different projects such as Media festivals, Literal festivals, International exchanges, concerts, organising events, informing people, running workshops, photography and just socializing with people.

In my free time a spent a lot of time workin with PHOTOSHOP, I have been practicing it for almost 4 years now. I have had 2 exhibitions of my own, and 4 as a co-author and co-organiser. My photos were displayed on two fashion shows. I also know how to work with illustrator and in Design, write HTML codes, work with Flash and all kinds of software.

I also like photography and almost everything about it, except the theoretical part.

I learn very quickly, specially computer software and i'm always open for
