A BRIEF INTRODUCTORY NOTE ON DR. JOHN H. WATSON'S NEWLY DISCOVERED MANUSCRIPT BY HIS GREAT GRANDSON, JOHN H. WATSON III

While it is indubitably the case that my great-grandfather's fame rests on the chronicles of his famous partner-in-crime, Mr. Sherlock Holmes, it is often overlooked that the fame of world's first "consulting detective" would simply not exist without Dr. John H. Watson. Never one to popularize his cases, Holmes, without my grandfather's steady hand, head, and sense of history, would simply have allowed his trove of notes and scattered case files to be shipped off to some stash of scholars' trivia in the sub-sub-basement of any obscure university library there to languish until some student, desperate for a thesis, dug it out to provide the world with one of those carefully constructed and terminally enervating tomes that pass for "an original contribution to knowledge" in these blighted times.

Indeed, the odds are heavily stacked in favor of obscurity for Holmes had not my great-grandfather chanced upon him in London after his return from service to his Queen and Country in Afghanistan. As a result, both myself and my father, John H. Watson II, always held among ourselves that the world is the richer not for one or the other of these exceptional individuals, but for what they made in combination. Because of this the Watson Family, such as it was and such as it has become, has always remained alert for every opportunity to remind passionate Holmsians around the world of our family motto: "Without Watson, no Holmes." Or, as Holmes himself so pithily put it, “Where would I be without my Boswell?” Where indeed?

Accordingly, when I came in possession of the sheaf of papers that form the body of this small but essential addition to the Holmes Canon my duty was clear, and no scion of the Watson clan has every shirked duty when it called.

I must confess at this juncture to being, at first, baffled by my discovery. I had been living a secluded life quite removed from the cares and bustle of the modern world in my chosen retreat just outside of a small town in a Western Canadian province (which modesty and a need for solitude even now compels me to conceal) when a letter from my family’s solicitors in London roused me from my pastoral stupor.

It seemed that a team of immigrant workmen (fortunately overseen by a foreman of stolid Cornish stock) had, while renovating what once had been my great-grandfather’s London digs, inadvertently uncovered a small closet at the back of my great-grandfather’s surgery that had been sealed up and covered with wallpaper at some time in the 1930s when the building had changed hands and gone through several incarnations as blitz target, rooming house and flats. Within, amongst the dust and detritus that bore mute testimony to the decades the closet had been undisturbed, was a sealed tea-chest with a label in my great-grandfather’s hand designating it as the property of one “John H. Watson, MD.”

After some inquiries, the Cornish foreman delivered it to my family's solicitors. Trusty men that they are, the solicitors -- upon determining my status as the sole surviving heir to the Watson estate -- informed me of the existence of the chest and the fact that they were shipping it to me forthwith in an unopened state. I was, of course, suitably intrigued by this, but saddened by the fact that, trustworthy as they might be, the solicitors were also quite penurious and had shipped the chest via sea and land rather than using the somewhat more expensive but highly more expedient method of air freight. As a result I had to temper my expectations and possess myself in patience for the four months it took the chest to arrive.

During this time my meditations on this unexpected harbinger from the past were fraught with fantasy. What if the chest contained tales of my great-grandfather and his famous companion? That would be an unexpected bonanza that all the world would relish and enjoy. Surely to expand "The Watson-Holmes Canon" with fresh material -- no matter how unfinished -- would bring delight to untold millions throughout the world as well as help me continue my own research into the breeding of a curly-haired Corgi which I had one day hoped to present to the Queen. Indeed, many dreams would be solved by such a coup. Mine not the least of them.

But dreams are sometimes made to be broken and, to some degree, this proved true of my own. Upon arrival, I set the chest in the middle of my modest home and merely gazed at it for several cups of tea. Finally I gathered up my hopes and courage and, with the aid of a trusty if rusted crowbar, pried off the top of the chest.

It seemed as if the very odor of those long-ago gas-lit evenings of London winters of sleet and a thick pea-soup fog embraced my small room. Gazing down into the shredded excelsior that formed the packing I descried a small leather bag. I carefully removed it for it was brittle with age and placed it upon the linoleum table in my kitchen where I could bring a bright light to bear upon it. Affixed to the outside was a small if tarnished silver plaque with the inscription "To Watson. In appreciation, S. Holmes" You may well imagine my excitement upon seeing this evidence of an association that was as legendary as it was strong. Indeed, I felt my pulse rate climb to unhealthy heights for a brief period.

Tripping the catch I opened the bag and, I must confess, was immediately and completely disappointed. Instead of folded manuscripts gushing from the cracked leather opening I descried only the faint glint of antique medical instruments and a number of bottles and flasks from which the contents has long since evaporated or decayed. It was only upon a second, closer inspection that I noticed a sheaf of foolscap, bound in the red ribbon common for legal complaints, lying at the bottom of the bag under a jumble of bottles and instruments.

I removed the tied bundle and carefully cut the ribbon to unfold it and let it see the light for the first time in nearly 100 years.

It took only a sliver of an instant for me to recognize the precise copperplate hand of my great-grandfather on the top sheet which said "Holmes -- Sayings Worth Noting." And on the following sheets a carefully compiled and corrected collection of those things Sherlock Holmes had said that my great-grandfather had found, upon reflection, worth saving in one place. From the faint shakiness of his otherwise stalwart script and the completeness of the material, I can only assume that -- while undated -- the manuscript was written out by him in the deep autumn of his years, long after his boon companion had gone to his reward, and Watson was left alone with only the fading coals of his memory to warm him.

Now, it was evident that all in this manuscript had been said before and that my great-grandfather was merely taking, if you will, a victory lap through his work before the fall of night, but it was and remains a genuine John H. Watson manuscript and, as a Watson -- the last of that name and the line -- my duty to see it to publication was clear. But how?

Having been a recluse for many years here in the Canadian outback with only my Corgis to sustain and comfort me, I was unfamiliar with the labyrinthine ways of modern publishing and ignorant of how to obtain a relationship with a firm that would bring these last notes of my illustrious ancestor to an admiring public. Indeed, the task daunted me for many months until, one dark and stormy night, I lay awake perusing the latest issue of the monthly newsletter "The Corgi Companion" and noted an exceptionally concise and pithy article on the difficulties of getting a publisher for the essential "Corgi Bloodlines" -- a volume of Corgi genealogy that is the bible of breeders such as myself. The author of this article related, in riveting detail, his search for a publisher that would undertake this mammoth project in the face of an indifferent world. That he had, through determination and sheer grit, succeeded in this seemingly impossible quest awoke in me only blind admiration. Suffice it to say that the post took my tale and my quandary to him the very next day.

As fate would have it, Mr. Gerard Van der Leun, was not only a devoted Corgi breeder such as myself, but highly conversant with the work of my late great-grandfather. After an extended exchange of letters on the subjects at hand, he elected to become my champion and put his shoulder to the wheel. And while the task may have been Sisyphean if not Stygean at times, you see its fruits before you.

It is the firm opinion of Mr. Van der Leun and myself that, while the proceeds from this publication will not be of copious sums as to permit us to complete our respective Corgi breeding projects (thus lightening and brightening our Queen's declining years with a shedless and cozy Corgi), it still merits some small attention from the world. Indeed, with the publication of this work, possibly the last ever penned by my great-grandfather, it is our fond hope that the efforts of all involved may bring to you, dear reader, an opportunity to once more refresh yourself by drinking deep from the mind of the man my own great-grandfather once called, "the best and the wisest man whom I have ever known."

“THE ONLY UNOFFICIAL CONSULTING DETECTIVE”

Sherlock Holmes- his limits:

1. Knowledge of Literature.- Nil.
2. Knowledge of Philosophy.- Nil.
3. Knowledge of Astronomy.- Nil.
4. Knowledge of Politics.- Feeble.
5. Knowledge of Botany.- Variable. Well up in belladonna, opium, and poisons generally. Knows nothing of practical gardening.
6. Knowledge of Geology.- Practical, but limited. Tells at a glance different soils from each other. After walks has shown me splashes upon his trousers, and told me by their color and consistence in what part of London he had received them.
7. Knowledge of Chemistry.- Profound.
8. Knowledge of Anatomy.- Accurate, but unsystematic.
9. Knowledge of Sensational Literature.- Immense. He appears to know every detail of every horror perpetrated in the century.
10. Plays the violin well.
11. Is an expert singlestick player, boxer, and swordsman.
12. Has a good practical knowledge of British law.

A Citizen's Business

“My name is Sherlock Holmes. Possibly it is familiar to you. In any case, my business is that of every other good citizen- to uphold the law. It seems to me that you have much to answer for.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF SHOSCOMBE OLD PLACE

Family

“My ancestors were country squires, who appear to have led much the same life as is natural to their class. But, none the less, my turn that way is in my veins, and may have come with my grandmother, who was the sister of Vernet, the French artist. Art in the blood is liable to take the strangest forms.”

--THE GREEK INTERPRETER

The Court of Last Resort

“The only unofficial consulting detective. I am the last and highest court of appeal in detection.

-- THE SIGN OF FOUR

Age

“I trust that age doth not wither nor custom stale my infinite variety.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE EMPTY HOUSE

Anonymity Preferred

“I prefer to work anonymously, and it is the problem itself which attracts me.”

-- THE PROBLEM OF THOR BRIDGE

His Profession

“Well, I have a trade of my own. I suppose I am the only one in the world. I'm a consulting detective, if you can understand what that is. Here in London we have lots of government detectives and lots of private ones. When these fellows are at fault, they come to me, and I manage to put them on the right scent. They lay all the evidence before me, and I am generally able, by the help of my knowledge of the history of crime, to set them straight. There is a strong family resemblance about misdeeds, and if you have all the details of a thousand at your finger ends, it is odd if you can't unravel the thousand and first.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

Basic Skills

“My eyes have been trained to examine faces and not their trimmings. It is the first quality of a criminal investigator that he should see through a disguise.”

-- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES

His Brief Career in British Intelligence

“Things were going wrong, and no one could understand why they were going wrong. Agents were suspected or even caught, but there was evidence of some strong and secret central force. It was absolutely necessary to expose it. Strong pressure was brought upon me to look into the matter. It has cost me two years, Watson, but they have not been devoid of excitement. When I say that I started my pilgrimage at Chicago, graduated in an Irish secret society at Buffalo, gave serious trouble to the constabulary at Skibbareen, and so eventually caught the eye of a subordinate agent of Von Bork, who recommended me as a likely man, you will realize that the matter was complex. Since then I have been honored by his confidence, which has not prevented most of his plans going subtly wrong and five of his best agents being in prison.”

-- HIS LAST BOW

His Calming Effect on Crime

“Besides, on general principles it is best that I should not leave the country. Scotland Yard feels lonely without me, and it causes an unhealthy excitement among the criminal classes.”

-- THE DISAPPEARANCE OF LADY FRANCES CARFAX

His Mind

“I hold a vast store of out-of-the-way knowledge without scientific system, but very available for the needs of my work. My mind is like a crowded box-room with packets of all sorts stowed away therein- so many that I may well have but a vague perception of what was there.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE LION'S MANE

His Chosen Aerobic Routine

“If you could have looked into Allardyce's back shop, you would have seen a dead pig swung from a hook in the ceiling, and a gentleman in his shirt sleeves furiously stabbing at it with this spear. I was that energetic person, and I have satisfied myself that by no exertion of my strength can I transfix the pig with a single blow.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF BLACK PETER

His College Chum

“You never heard me talk of Victor Trevor? He was the only friend I made during the two years I was at college. I was never a very sociable fellow, always rather fond of moping in my rooms and working out my own little methods of thought, so that I never mixed much with the men of my year. Bar fencing and boxing I had few athletic tastes, and then my line of study was quite distinct from that of the other fellows, so that we had no points of contact at all. Trevor was the only man I knew, and that only through the accident of his bull terrier freezing on to my ankle one morning as I went down to chapel.”

-- THE “GLORIA SCOTT”

His Library Skills

“There is a great garret in my little house which is stuffed with books. It was into this that I plunged and rummaged for all hour. At the end of that time I emerged with a little chocolate and silver volume. Eagerly I turned up the chapter of which I had a dim remembrance. Yes, it was indeed a far-fetched and unlikely proposition, and yet I could not be at rest until I had made sure if it might, indeed, be so.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE LION'S MANE

His Enduring Motivation

“I play the game for the game's own sake.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE BRUCE-PARTINGTON PLANS

His Net Worth

“Between ourselves, the recent cases in which I have been of assistance to the royal family of Scandinavia, and to the French republic, have left me in such a position that I could continue to live in the quiet fashion which is most congenial to me, and to concentrate my attention upon my chemical researches.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

To Boom or Not to Boom

“I do not think that I am in need of booming.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THOR BRIDGE

Can He Get A Witness?

“Do not dream of going, Watson, for I very much prefer having a witness, if only as a check to my own memory. “

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE NOBLE BACHELOR

Current Cases On Hand

“Some ten or twelve, but none which present any feature of interest. They are important, you understand, without being interesting.”

-- A CASE OF IDENTITY

Don't Mention It

“I should prefer that you do not mention my name at all in connection with the case, as I choose to be only associated with those crimes which present some difficulty in their solution.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE CARDBOARD BOX

Drama, Love of

“Watson here will tell you that I never can resist a touch of the dramatic.”

-- THE NAVAL TREATY

Work, Work, Work

“My mind rebels at stagnation. Give me problems, give me work, give me the most abstruse cryptogram, or the most intricate analysis, and I am in my own proper atmosphere. I can dispense then with artificial stimulants.

-- THE SIGN OF FOUR

He Goes On the Lam

“ I have my plans laid, and all will be well. Matters have gone so far now that they can move without my help as far as the arrest goes, though my presence is necessary for a conviction. It is obvious, therefore, that I cannot do better than get away for the few days which remain before the police are at liberty to act. It would be a great pleasure to me, therefore, if you could come on to the Continent with me.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

Just Mention My Name

They have the crown down at Hurlstone - though they had some legal bother and a considerable sum to pay before they were allowed to retain it. I am sure that if you mentioned my name they would be happy to show it to you.

-- THE MUSGRAVE RITUAL

The Limits of the Mind

“There are limits, you see, to our friend's intelligence. It would have been a coup-mattre had he deduced what I would deduce and acted accordingly.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

More About His Limitations

“I fear that if the matter is beyond humanity it is certainly beyond me.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEVIL'S FOOT

London's Luck

“It is fortunate for this community that I am not a criminal.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE BRUCE-PARTINGTON PLANS

Not a Lover

“I have never loved, Watson, but if I did and if the woman I loved had met such an end, I might have done as our lawless lion-hunter has done.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEVIL'S FOOT

On Being Held in Reserve

“I remain an unknown factor in the business, ready to throw in all my weight at a critical moment.”

-- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES

Meeting Suspects

“I love to come to close grips with my man. I like to meet him eye to eye and read for myself the stuff that he is made of.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE ILLUSTRIOUS CLIENT

Not the Law

“I am not the law, but I represent justice so far as my feeble powers go. I am ready to listen, and then I will tell you how I will act.”

--THE ADVENTURE OF THE THREE GABLES

One Punch

It was a straight left against a slogging ruffian. I emerged as you see me. Mr. Woodley went home in a cart. -- THE ADVENTURE OF THE SOLITARY CYCLIST

Perils of a High Performance Mind

“My mind is like a racing engine, tearing itself to pieces because it is not connected up with the work for which it was built.

-- THE ADVENTURE OF WISTERIA LODGE

Prix Fixe

“My professional charges are upon a fixed scale. I do not vary them, save when I remit them altogether.”

-- THE PROBLEM OF THOR BRIDGE

Signs of Manic-Depression

“Let me see- what are my other shortcomings? I get in the dumps at times, and don't open my mouth for days on end. You must not think I am sulky when I do that. Just let me alone, and I'll soon be right. What have you to confess now? It's just as well for two fellows to know the worst of one another before they begin to live together.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

Summing Up

“I think that I may go so far as to say that I have not lived wholly in vain. If my record were closed tonight I could still survey it with equanimity. The air of London is the sweeter for my presence. In over a thousand cases I am not aware that I have ever used my powers upon the wrong side. Of late I have been tempted to look into the problems furnished by nature rather than those more superficial ones for which our artificial state of society is responsible.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

His Last Will and Testament

I write these few lines through the courtesy of Mr. Moriarty, who awaits my convenience for the final discussion of those questions which lie between us. He has been giving me a sketch of the methods by which he avoided the English police and kept himself informed of our movements. They certainly confirm the very high opinion which I had formed of his abilities. I am pleased to think that I shall be able to free society from any further effects of his presence, though I fear that it is at a cost which will give pain to my friends, and especially, my dear Watson, to you. I have already explained to you, however, that my career had in any case reached its crisis, and that no possible conclusion to it could be more congenial to me than this. Indeed, if I may make a full confession to you, I was quite convinced that the letter from Meiringen was a hoax, and I allowed you to depart on that errand under the persuasion that some development of this sort would follow. Tell Inspector Patterson that the papers which he needs to convict the gang are in pigeonhole M., done up in a blue envelope and inscribed "Moriarty." I made every disposition of my property before leaving England and handed it to my brother Mycroft. Pray give my greetings to Mrs. Watson, and believe me to be, my dear fellow,

Very sincerely yours,
SHERLOCK HOLMES.

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

His Defeats

"I have been beaten four times -- three times by men, and once by a woman."

-- THE FIVE ORANGE PIPS

His Raison D'etre

"Because it is my desire. Is that not enough?"

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE DYING DETECTIVE

His Own Worst Enemy

"I suspect myself. Of coming to conclusions too rapidly."

-- THE NAVAL TREATY

His Reading List

“I read nothing except the criminal news and the agony column.
The latter is always instructive.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE NOBLE BACHELOR

HIS CREDO

Brainwork and the Meaning of Life

“I cannot live without brainwork. What else is there to live for? Stand at the window here. Was ever such a dreary, dismal, unprofitable world? See how the yellow fog swirls down the street and drifts across the duncoloured houses. What could be more hopelessly prosaic and material? What is the use of having powers, Doctor, when one has no field upon which to exert them? Crime is commonplace, existence is commonplace, and no qualities save those which are commonplace have any function upon earth.”

-- THE SIGN OF FOUR

Law, Staying On the Right Side of

“In over a thousand cases I am not aware that I have ever used my powers upon the wrong side.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

Facts, When Not to Get In Front of Them

“I have not all my facts yet but I do not think there are any insuperable difficulties. Still, it is an error to argue in front of your data. You find yourself insensibly twisting them round to fit your theories.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF WISTERIA LODGE

Will Work for Expenses

“As to reward, my profession is its own reward; but you are at liberty to defray whatever expenses I may be put to, at the time which suits you best.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE SPECKLED BAND

The Right Atmosphere

“It is a singular thing, but I find that a concentrated atmosphere helps a concentration of thought. I have not pushed it to the length of getting into a box to think, but that is the logical outcome of my convictions. Have you turned the case over in your mind?”

-- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES

Whole Duty of a Detective

“It was my duty to bring the facts to light, and there I must leave it. As to the morality or decency of your conduct, it is not for me to express an opinion. It is nearly midnight, Watson, and I think we may make our way back to our humble abode.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF SHOSCOMBE OLD PLACE

Will Work for Stimulation

“Even the most insignificant problem would be welcome in these stagnant days.”

--THE ADVENTURE OF THE MISSING THREE-QUARTER

Wings on Criminals Highly Unlikely At This Time

“I have investigated many crimes, but I have never yet seen one which was committed by a flying creature. As long as the criminal remains upon two legs so long must there be some indentation, some abrasion, some trifling displacement which can be detected by the scientific searcher.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF BLACK PETER

Work Is Its Own Reward

I examine the data, as an expert, and pronounce a specialist's opinion. I claim no credit in such cases. My name figures in no newspaper. The work itself, the pleasure of finding a field for my peculiar powers, is my highest reward.”

-- THE SIGN OF FOUR

How to Furnish Your Brain

“I consider that a man's brain originally is like a little empty attic, and you have to stock it with such furniture as you choose. A fool takes in all the lumber of every sort that he comes across, so that the knowledge which might be useful to him gets crowded out, or at best is jumbled up with a lot of other things, so that he has a difficulty in laying his hands upon it. Now the skillful workman is very careful indeed as to what he takes into his brain-attic. He will have nothing but the tools which may help him in doing his work, but of these he has a large assortment, and all in the most perfect order. It is a mistake to think that that room has elastic walls and can distend to any extent. Depend upon it there comes a time when for every addition of knowledge you forget something that you knew before. It is of the highest importance, therefore, not to have useless facts elbowing out the useful ones.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

“I HAVE SOME KNOWLEDGE, HOWEVER, OF BARITSU:” ARTS, MARTIAL AND OTHERWISE

Martial Arts

“I have some knowledge, however, of baritsu, or the Japanese system of wrestling, which has more than once been very useful to me.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE EMPTY HOUSE

German

“Though unmusical, German is the most expressive of all languages.”

-- HIS LAST BOW

American Lingo

“American slang is very expressive sometimes.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE NOBLE BACHELOR

On Narrative Drive

“Tell us what you can, but stop when you are tired and keep up your strength with a little stimulant.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE ENGINEER'S THUMB

Backwards Narratives Made Habitual

“I am getting into your involved habit, Watson, of telling a story backward.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE MAZARIN STONE

DETECTION, THE LIFE STYLE

The Exact Science

“Detection is, or ought to be, an exact science and should be treated in the same cold and unemotional manner. You have attempted to tinge it with romanticism, which produces much the same effect as if you worked a love-story or an elopement into the fifth proposition of Euclid.”

-- THE SIGN OF FOUR

The Connoisseur of Crime

“Breadth of view is one of the essentials of our profession. The interplay of ideas and the oblique uses of knowledge are often of extraordinary interest. You will excuse these remarks from one who, though a mere connoisseur of crime, is still rather older and perhaps more experienced than yourself.”

-- THE VALLEY OF FEAR

On Circularity, in Crime and Life

“Mr. Mac, the most practical thing that you ever did in your life would be to shut yourself up for three months and read twelve hours a day at the annals of crime. Everything comes in circles.... The old wheel turns, and the same spoke comes up. It's all been done before, and will be again.”

-- THE VALLEY OF FEAR

Death Threats

“The old sweet song. How often have I heard it in days gone by. It was a favorite ditty of the late lamented Professor Moriarty. Colonel Sebastian Moran has also been known to warble it. And yet I live and keep bees upon the South Downs.”

-- HIS LAST BOW

Challenge of Crime

“There are no crimes and no criminals in these days. What is the use of having brains in our profession? I know well that I have it in me to make my name famous. No man lives or has ever lived who has brought the same amount of study and of natural talent to the detection of crime which I have done. And what is the result? There is no crime to detect, or, at most, some bungling villainy with a motive so transparent that even a Scotland Yard official can see through it.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

The Drama of a Detective's Life

An Alternate Profession

“Burglary has always been an alternative profession had I cared to adopt it, and I have little doubt that I should have come to the front.

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE RETIRED COLOURMAN

Cases Beginning with the Letter V

“But what do we know about vampires? Does it come within our purview either? Anything is better than stagnation, but really we seem to have been switched on to a Grimms' fairy tale. Make a long arm, Watson, and see what V has to say.”

"Voyage of the Gloria Scott. That was a bad business. I have some recollection that you made a record of it, Watson, though I was unable to congratulate you upon the result. Victor Lynch, the forger. Venomous lizard or gila. Remarkable case, that! Vittoria, the circus belle. Vanderbilt and the Yeggman. Vipers. Vigor, the Hammersmith wonder. Hullo! Hullo! Good old index. You can't beat it. Listen to this, Watson. Vampirism in Hungary. And again, Vampires in Transylvania."

Work, Work, Work, Work

“It is a most singular thing that a problem which was certainly as abstruse and unusual as any which I have faced in my long professional career should have come to me after my retirement, and be brought, as it were, to my very door.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE LION'S MANE

The Human Target

“This man's occupation is gone. He is lost if he returns to London. If I read his character right he will devote his whole energies to revenging himself upon me. He said as much in our short interview, and I fancy that he meant it. I should certainly recommend you to return to your practice.”

Just One of Those Days

“Professor Moriarty is not a man who lets the grass grow under his feet. I went out about midday to transact some business in Oxford Street. As I passed the corner which leads from Bentinck Street on to the Welbeck Street crossing a two-horse van furiously driven whizzed round and was on me like a flash. I sprang for the foot-path and saved myself by the fraction of a second. The van dashed round by Marylebone Lane and was gone in an instant. I kept to the pavement after that, but as I walked down Vere Street a brick came down from the roof of one of the houses and was shattered to fragments at my feet. I called the police and had the place examined. There were slates and bricks piled up on the roof preparatory to some repairs, and they would have me believe that the wind had toppled over one of these. Of course I knew better, but I could prove nothing. I took a cab after that and reached my brother's rooms in Pall Mall, where I spent the day. Now I have come round to you, and on my way I was attacked by a rough with a bludgeon. I knocked him down, and the police have him in custody; but I can tell you with the most absolute confidence that no possible connection will ever be traced between the gentleman upon whose front teeth I have barked my knuckles and the retiring mathematical coach, who is, I daresay, working out problems upon a black-board ten miles away. You will not wonder that my first act on entering your rooms was to close your shutters, and that I have been compelled to ask your permission to leave the house by some less conspicuous exit than the front door.”

Yet they are not averse to comfortable chairs and the latest periodicals. It is for the convenience of these that the Diogenes Club was started, and it now contains the most unsociable and unclubable men in town. No member is permitted to take the least notice of any other one. Save in the Stranger's Room, no talking is, under any circumstances, allowed, and three offenses, if brought to the notice of the committee, render the talker liable to expulsion. Attractive Woman

“ She is beautiful, but with the ethereal other-world beauty of some fanatic whose thoughts are set on high. I have seen such faces in the pictures of the old masters of the Middle Ages. How a beastman could have laid his vile paws upon such a being of the beyond I cannot imagine. You may have noticed how extremes call to each other, the spiritual to the animal, the cave-man to the angel. You never saw a worse case than this.”

Signs of A Broken Heart

“It is simplicity itself. When you bared your arm to draw that fish into the boat I saw that J. A. had been tattooed in the bend of the elbow. The letters were still legible, but it was perfectly clear from their blurred appearance, and from the staining of the skin round them, that efforts had been made to obliterate them. She is the most harmless and often the most useful of mortals, but she is the inevitable inciter of crime in others. She is helpless. She is migratory. She has sufficient means to take her from country to country and from hotel to hotel. She is lost, as often as not, in a maze of obscure pensions and boarding-houses. She is a stray chicken in a world of foxes. When she is gobbled up she is hardly missed.”

-- THE DISAPPEARANCE OF LADY FRANCES CARFAX

Domestic Bliss

“This is the Dundas separation case, and, as it happens, I was engaged in clearing up some small points in connection with it. The husband was a teetotaler, there was no other woman, and the conduct complained of was that he had drifted into the habit of winding up every meal by taking out his false teeth and hurling them at his wife, which, you will allow, is not an action likely to occur to the imagination of the average story-teller.”

-- A CASE OF IDENTITY

Fatherhood, Thoughts on

“I thought of her for the moment as I would have thought of a daughter of my own. I am not often eloquent. I use my head, not my heart. But I really did plead with her with all the warmth of words that I could find in my nature. I pictured to her the awful position of the woman who only wakes to a man's character after she is his wife- a woman who has to submit to be caressed by bloody hands and lecherous lips. I spared her nothing- the shame, the fear, the agony, the hopelessness of it all. All my hot words could not bring one tinge of color to those ivory cheeks or one gleam of emotion to those abstracted eyes. I thought of what the rascal had said about a post-hypnotic influence. One could really believe that she was living above the earth in some ecstatic dream. Yet there was nothing indefinite in her replies.”

“Exactly! But does the name Isadora Klein convey nothing to you? She was, of course, the celebrated beauty. There was never a woman to touch her. She is pure Spanish, the real blood of the masterful Conquistadors, and her people have been leaders in Pernambuco for generations. She married the aged German sugar king, Klein, and presently found herself the richest as well as the most lovely widow upon earth. Then there was an interval of adventure when she pleased her own tastes. She had several lovers, and Douglas Maberley, one of the most striking men in London, was one of them. It was by all accounts more than an adventure with him. He was not a society butterfly but a strong, proud man who gave and expected all. But she is the 'belle dame sans merci' of fiction. Obviously they have been caused by someone who has very carelessly scraped round the edges of the sole in order to remove crusted mud from it. Hence, you see, my double deduction that you had been out in vile weather, and that you had a particularly malignant boot-slitting specimen of the London slavey. As to your practice, if a gentleman walks into my rooms smelling of iodoform, with a black mark of nitrate of silver upon his right forefinger, and a bulge on the right side of his top-hat to show where he has secreted his stethoscope, I must be dull, indeed, if I do not pronounce him to be an active member of the medical profession.”

Now for the central table. This small pellet is, I presume, the black, doughy mass you spoke of. Roughly pyramidal in shape and hollowed out, I perceive. As you say, there appear to be grains of sawdust in it. Dear

“There is nothing in which deduction is so necessary as in religion. It can be built up as an exact science by the reasoner. Our highest assurance of the goodness of Providence seems to me to rest in the flowers. All other things, our powers, our desires, our food, are all really necessary for our existence in the first instance. But this rose is an extra. Its smell and its color are an embellishment of life, not a condition of it. It is only goodness which gives extras, and so I say again that we have much to hope from the flowers.”

Concentration

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THOR BRIDGE

Backward Reasoning Made Easy

“Let me see if I can make it clearer. Most people, if you describe a train of events to them, will tell you what the result would be. They can put those events together in their minds, and argue from them that something will come to pass. There are few people, however, who, if you told them a result, would be able to evolve from their own inner consciousness what the steps were which led up to that result. This power is what I mean when I talk of reasoning backward, or analytically.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

Afghanistan, Train of Thought to ...

“Nothing of the sort. I knew you came from Afghanistan. From long habit the train of thoughts ran so swiftly through my mind that I arrived at the conclusion without being conscious of intermediate steps. There were such steps, however. The train of reasoning ran, ‘Here is a gentleman of a medical type, but with the air of a military man. Clearly an army doctor, then. He has just come from the tropics, for his face is dark, and that is not the natural tint of his skin, for his wrists are fair. He has undergone hardship and sickness, as his haggard face says clearly. His left arm has been injured. He holds it in a stiff and unnatural manner. Where in the tropics could an English army doctor have seen much hardship and got his arm wounded? Clearly in Afghanistan.’ The whole train of thought did not occupy a second. I then remarked that you came from Afghanistan, and you were astonished.”

The Analytical Mind, Advantages of

“I have already explained to you that what is out of the common is usually a guide rather than a hindrance. In solving a problem of this sort, the grand thing is to be able to reason backward. That is a very useful accomplishment, and a very easy one, but people do not practice it much. In the everyday affairs of life it is more useful to reason forward, and so the other comes to be neglected. There are fifty who can reason synthetically for one who can reason analytically.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

Breaking Codes

“I am fairly familiar with all forms of secret writings, and am myself the author of a trifling monograph upon the subject, in which I analyze one hundred and sixty separate ciphers, but I confess that this is entirely new to me. The object of those who invented the system has apparently been to conceal that these characters convey a message, and to give the idea that they are the mere random sketches of children.

"Having once recognized, however, that the symbols stood for letters, and having applied the rules which guide us in all forms of secret writings, the solution was easy enough.

"The first message submitted to me was so short that it was impossible for me to do more than to say, with some confidence, that the symbol of the stickman with both arms extended up in the air stood for E. As you are aware, E is the most common letter in the English alphabet, and it predominates to so marked an extent that even in a short sentence one would expect to find it most often. Out of fifteen symbols in the first message, four were the same, so it was reasonable to set this down as E.

HIS NEMESIS

The Napoleon of Crime

“He is the Napoleon of crime, Watson. He is the organizer of half that is evil and of nearly all that is undetected in this great city. He is a genius, a philosopher, an abstract thinker. He has a brain of the first order.

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

The Very Model of a Modern Major Criminal

“Ay, there's the genius and the wonder of the thing. The man pervades London, and no one has heard of him. That's what puts him on a pinnacle in the records of crime. I tell you, in all seriousness, that if I could beat that man, if I could free society of him, I should feel that my own career had reached its summit, and I should be prepared to turn to some more placid line in life.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

The Professor Described

“His appearance was quite familiar to me. He is extremely tall and thin, his forehead domes out in a white curve, and his two eyes are deeply sunken in his head. He is clean-shaven, pale, and ascetic-looking, retaining something of the professor in his features. His shoulders are rounded from much study, and his face protrudes forward and is forever slowly oscillating from side to side in a curiously reptilian fashion. He peered at me with great curiosity in his puckered eyes.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

The Resume of Nemesis

“His career has been an extraordinary one. He is a man of good birth and excellent education, endowed by nature with a phenomenal mathematical faculty. At the age of twenty-one he wrote a treatise upon the binomial theorem, which has had a European vogue. On the strength of it he won the mathematical chair at one of our smaller universities, and had, to all appearances, a most brilliant career before him. But the man had hereditary tendencies of the most diabolical kind. A criminal strain ran in his blood, which, instead of being modified, was increased and rendered infinitely more dangerous by his extraordinary mental powers. Dark rumors gathered round him in the university town, and eventually he was compelled to resign his chair and to come down to London, where he set up as an army coach.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

A Worthy Opponent

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

Mission Impossible

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

The Trial of the Century

In three days-that is to say, on Monday next-matters will be ripe, and the professor, with all the principal members of his gang, will be in the hands of the police. Then will come the greatest criminal trial of the century, the clearing up of over forty mysteries, and the rope for all of them; but if we move at all prematurely, you understand, they may slip out of our hands even at the last moment.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

The Endgame

“Now, if I could have done this without the knowledge of Professor Moriarty, all would have been well. But he was too wily for that. He saw every step which I took to draw my coils round him. Again and again he strove to break away, but I as often headed him off.

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

The Number One Contest in History

I tell you, my friend, that if a detailed account of that silent contest could be written, it would take its place as the most brilliant bit of thrust-and-parry work in the history of detection. Never have I risen to such a height, and never have I been so hard pressed by an opponent. He cut deep, and yet I just undercut him. This morning the last steps were taken, and three days only were wanted to complete the business. I was sitting in my room thinking the matter over when the door opened and Professor Moriarty stood before me.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

His Nemesis' Voice

“That was my singular interview with Professor Moriarty. I confess that it left an unpleasant effect upon my mind. His soft, precise fashion of speech leaves a conviction of sincerity which a mere bully could not produce. Of course, you will say: 'Why not take police precautions against him?' The reason is that I am well convinced that it is from his agents the blow would fall. I have the best of proofs that it would be so.”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

Never Underestimate Your Nemesis

“My dear Watson, you evidently did not realize my meaning when I said that this man may be taken as being quite on the same intellectual plane as myself. You do not imagine that if I were the pursuer I should allow myself to be baffled by so slight an obstacle. Why, then, should you think so meanly of him?”

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

Moriarty, Genius of

“But in calling Moriarty a criminal you are uttering libel in the eyes of the law- and there lie the glory and the wonder of it! The greatest schemer of all time, the organizer of every deviltry, the controlling brain of the underworld, a brain which might have made or marred the destiny of nations- that's the man! But so aloof is he from general suspicion, so immune from criticism, so admirable in his management and self-effacement, that for those very words that you have uttered he could hale you to a court and emerge with your year's pension as a solatium for his wounded character. Is he not the celebrated author of The Dynamics of an Asteroid, a book which ascends to such rarefied heights of pure mathematics that it is said that there was no man in the scientific press capable of criticizing it? Is this a man to traduce? Foul-mouthed doctor and slandered professor- such would be your respective roles! That's genius, Watson. But if I am spared by lesser men, our day will surely come.”

-- THE VALLEY OF FEAR

Sinister, in the Highest Degree

“Porlock, Watson, is a nom-de-plume, a mere identification mark; but behind it lies a shifty and evasive personality. In a former letter he frankly informed me that the name was not his own, and defied me ever to trace him among the teeming millions of this great city. Porlock is important, not for himself, but for the great man with whom he is in touch. Picture to yourself the pilot fish with the shark, the jackal with the lion- anything that is insignificant in companionship with what is formidable: not only formidable, Watson, but sinister- in the highest degree sinister. That is where he comes within my purview. You have heard me speak of Professor Moriarty?”

-- THE VALLEY OF FEAR

Powers of Darkness and Possibilities

“When you have one of the first brains of Europe up against you, and all the powers of darkness at his back, there are infinite possibilities.”

-- THE VALLEY OF FEAR

Reports of My Death...

“It came about in this way. The instant that the Professor had disappeared, it struck me what a really extraordinarily lucky chance Fate had placed in my way. I knew that Moriarty was not the only man who had sworn my death. There were at least three others whose desire for vengeance upon me would only be increased by the death of their leader. They were all most dangerous men. One or other would certainly get me. On the other hand, if all the world was convinced that I was dead they would take liberties, these men, they would soon lay themselves open, and sooner or later I could destroy them. Then it would be time for me to announce that I was still in the land of the living. So rapidly does the brain act that I believe I had thought this all out before Professor Moriarty had reached the bottom of the Reichenbach Fall.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE EMPTY HOUSE

The Lamented Passing of Professor Moriarty

“The community is certainly the gainer, and no one the loser, save the poor out-of-work specialist, whose occupation has gone. With that man in the field, one's morning paper presented infinite possibilities. Often it was only the smallest trace, the faintest indication, and yet it was enough to tell me that the great malignant brain was there, as the gentlest tremors of the edges of the web remind one of the foul spider which lurks in the center. Petty thefts, wanton assaults, purposeless outrage- to the man who held the clue all could be worked into one connected whole. To the scientific student of the higher criminal world, no capital in Europe offered the advantages which London then possessed. But now-”

The Nose Knows

“That was our first clue. You can thank Dr. Waste’s observation for that, though he failed to draw the inference. It set my foot upon the trail. Why should this man at such a time be filling his house with strong odorous? Obviously, to cover some other smell which he wished to conceal- some guilty smell which would suggest suspicions. then came the idea of a room such as you see here with iron door and shutter- a hermetically sealed room.”

The Science of Deduction

“From a drop of water, a logician could infer the possibility of an Atlantic or a Niagara without having seen or heard of one or the other. So all life is a great chain, the nature of which is known whenever we are shown a single link of it. Like all other arts, the Science of Deduction and Analysis is one which can only be acquired by long and patient study, nor is life long enough to allow any mortal to attain the highest possible perfection in it. Before turning to those moral and mental aspects of the matter which present the greatest difficulties, let the inquirer begin by mastering more elementary problems. Let him, on meeting a fellow-mortal, learn at a glance to distinguish the history of the man, and the trade or profession to which he belongs. Puerile as such an exercise may seem, it sharpens the faculties of observation, and teaches one where to look and what to look for. By a man's finger-nails, by his coat-sleeve, by his boots, by his trouser knees, by the callosities of his forefinger and thumb, by his expression, by his shirt-cuffs- by each of these things a man's calling is plainly revealed. That all united should fail to enlighten the competent inquirer in any case is almost inconceivable.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

Observation, The Value of Simple...

“It is simplicity itself, so absurdly simple that an explanation is superfluous; and yet it may serve to define the limits of observation and of deduction. Observation tells me that you have a little reddish mold adhering to your instep. Just opposite the Wigmore Street Office they have taken up the pavement and thrown up some earth, which lies in such a way that it is difficult to avoid treading in it in entering. The earth is of this peculiar reddish tint which is found, as far as I know, nowhere else in the neighborhood. So much is observation. The rest is deduction.”

Pipes, Deductions from

“He has been in the habit of lighting his pipe at lamps and gas-jets. You can see that it is quite charred all down one side. Of course a match could not have done that. Why should a man hold a match to the side of his pipe? But you cannot light it at a lamp without getting the bowl charred. And it is all on the right side of the pipe. From that I gather that he is a left-handed man. You hold your own Pipe to the lamp and see how naturally you, being right-handed, hold the left side to the flame. You might do it once the other way, but not as a constancy. This has always been held so. Then he has bitten through his amber. It takes a muscular, energetic fellow, and one with a good set of teeth, to do that. But if I am not mistaken I hear him upon the stair, so we shall have something more interesting than his pipe to study.”

Glasses, What They Say

“Surely my deductions are simplicity itself. It would be difficult to name any articles which afford a finer field for inference than a pair of glasses, especially so remarkable a pair as these. That they belong to a woman I infer from their delicacy, and also, of course, from the last words of the dying man. As to her being a person of refinement and well dressed, they are, as you perceive, handsomely mounted in solid gold, and it is inconceivable that anyone who wore such glasses could be slatternly in other respects. You will find that the clips are too wide for your nose, showing that the lady's nose was very broad at the base. This sort of nose is usually a short and coarse one, but there is a sufficient number of exceptions to prevent me from being dogmatic or from insisting upon this point in my description. My own face is a narrow one, and yet I find that I cannot get my eyes into the center, nor near the center, of these glasses. Therefore, the lady's eyes are set very near to the sides of the nose. You will perceive that the glasses are concave and of unusual strength. A lady whose vision has been so extremely contracted all her life is sure to have the physical characteristics of such vision, which are seen in the forehead, the eyelids, and the shoulders.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE GOLDEN PINCE-NEZ

Knowing vs. Explaining

“It was easier to know it than to explain why I know it. If you were asked to prove that two and two made four, you might find some difficulty, and yet you are quite sure of the fact. Even across the street I could see a great blue anchor tattooed on the back of the fellow's hand. That smacked of the sea. He had a military carriage, however, and regulation side whiskers. There we have the marine. He was a man with some amount of self-importance and a certain air of command. You must have observed the way in which he held his head and swung his cane. A steady, respectable, middle-aged man, too, on the face of him- all facts which led me to believe that he had been a sergeant.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

What He Could Tell from a Hat

“It is perhaps less suggestive than it might have been, and yet there are a few inferences which are very distinct, and a few others which represent at least a strong balance of probability. That the man was highly intellectual is of course obvious upon the face of it, and also that he was fairly well-to-do within the last three years, although he has now fallen upon evil days. He had foresight, but has less now than formerly, pointing to a moral retrogression, which, when taken with the decline of his fortunes, seems to indicate some evil influence, probably drink, at work upon him. This may account also for the obvious fact that his wife has ceased to love him.”

"He has, however, retained some degree of self-respect. He is a man who leads a sedentary life, goes out little, is out of training entirely, is middle-aged, has grizzled hair which he has had cut within the last few days, and which he anoints with lime-cream. These are the more patent facts which are to be deduced from his hat. Also, by the way, that it is extremely improbable that he has gas laid on in his house."

This small clump of buildings here is the hamlet of Grimpen, where our friend Dr. Mortimer has his headquarters. Within a radius of five miles there are, as you see, only a very few scattered dwellings. Here is Lafter Hall, which was mentioned in the narrative. There is a house indicated here which may be the residence of the naturalist- Stapleton, if I remember right, was his name. Here are two moorland farmhouses, High Tor and Foulmire. Then fourteen miles away the great convict prison of Princetown. Between and around these scattered points extends the desolate, lifeless moor. This, then, is the stage upon which tragedy has been played, and upon which we may help to play it again.”

The same great powers which I have turned to the detection of crime he has used for this particular business. The conclusions of every department are passed to him, and he is the central exchange, the clearing-house, which makes out the balance. All other men are specialists, but his specialism is omniscience. We will suppose that a minister needs information as to a point which involves the Navy, India, Canada and the bimetallic question; he could get his separate advices from various departments upon each, but only Mycroft can focus them all, and say offhand how each factor would affect the other. They began by using him as a short-cut, a convenience; now he has made himself an essential. In that great brain of his everything is pigeon-holed and can be handed out in an instant. That Inferior Dupin

“Now, in my opinion, Dupin was a very inferior fellow. That trick of his of breaking in on his friends' thoughts with an apropos

What It Is

“It is murder, refined, cold-blooded, deliberate murder. Do not ask me for particulars. My nets are closing upon him, and he is already almost at my mercy. There is but one danger which can threaten us. It is that he should strike before we are ready to do so. Another day- two at the most- and I have my case complete, but until then guard your charge as closely as ever a fond mother watched her ailing child.”

-- THE HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES

The Blue Carbuncle

“It's a bonny thing. Just see how it glints and sparkles. Of course it is a nucleus and focus of crime. Every good stone is. They are the devil's pet baits. In the larger and older jewels every facet may stand for a bloody deed. This stone is not yet twenty years old. It was found in the banks of the Amoy River in southern China and is remarkable in having every characteristic of the carbuncle, save that it is blue in shade instead of ruby red. In spite of its youth, it has already a sinister history. There have been two murders, a vitriol-throwing, a suicide, and several robberies brought about for the sake of this forty grain weight of crystallized charcoal. Who would think that so pretty a toy would be a purveyor to the gallows and the prison?"

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE BLUE CARBUNCLE

The Ears Have It

"Bodies in the dissecting-rooms are injected with preservative fluid. These ears bear no signs of this. They are fresh, too. They have been cut off with a blunt instrument, which would hardly happen if a student had done it. Again, carbolic or rectified spirits would be the preservatives which would suggest themselves to the medical mind, certainly not rough salt. I repeat that there is no practical joke here, but that we are investigating a serious crime."

In last years Anthropological Journal you will find two short monographs from my pen upon the subject. I had, therefore, examined the ears in the box with the eyes of an expert and had carefully noted their anatomical peculiarities. Imagine my surprise, then, when on looking at Miss Cushing I perceived that her ear corresponded exactly with the female ear which I had just inspected. The matter was entirely beyond coincidence. At

Again and again in cases of the most varying sorts-forgery cases, robberies, murders-I have felt the presence of this force, and I have deduced its action in many of those undiscovered crimes in which I have not been personally consulted. For years I have endeavored to break through the veil which shrouded it, and at last the time came when I seized my thread and followed it, until it led me, after a thousand cunning windings, to ex-Professor Moriarty, of mathematical celebrity.”

The Milverton Method

“He is the king of all the blackmailers. Heaven help the man, and still more the woman, whose secret and reputation come into the power of Milverton! With a smiling face and a heart of marble, he will squeeze and squeeze until he has drained them dry. The fellow is a genius in his way, and would have made his mark in some more savoury trade. His method is as follows: He allows it to be known that he is prepared to pay very high sums for letters which compromise people of wealth and position. He receives these wares not only from treacherous valets or maids, but frequently from genteel ruffians, who have gained the confidence and affection of trusting women. He deals with no niggard hand. I happen to know that he paid seven hundred pounds to a footman for a note two lines in length, and that the ruin of a noble family was the result. Everything which is in the market goes to Milverton, and there are hundreds in this great city who turn white at his name. No one knows where his grip may fall, for he is far too rich and far too cunning to work from hand to mouth. He will hold a card back for years in order to play it at the moment when the stake is best worth winning. I have said that he is the worst man in London, and I would ask you how could one compare the ruffian, who in hot blood bludgeons his mate, with this man, who methodically and at his leisure tortures the soul and wrings the nerves in order to add to his already swollen money-bags?"

Planning Counts

"Where a crime is coolly premeditated, then the means of covering it are coolly premeditated also."

-- THE PROBLEM OF THOR BRIDGE

The Reptile of Crime

“Do you feel a creeping, shrinking sensation, Watson, when you stand before the serpents in the Zoo, and see the slithery, gliding, venomous creatures, with their deadly eyes and wicked, flattened faces? Well, that's how Milverton impresses me. I've had to do with fifty murderers in my career, but the worst of them never gave me the repulsion which I have for this fellow. And yet I can't get out of doing business with him- indeed, he is here at my invitation.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF CHARLES AUGUSTUS MILVERTON

Simple Crimes

“The larger crimes are apt to be the simpler, for the bigger the crime the more obvious, as a rule, is the motive.”

-- A CASE OF IDENTITY

Slow Criminals

“The London criminal is certainly a dull fellow.”

Wound Sucking, Reasons for

“Did it not occur to you that a bleeding wound may be sucked for some other purpose than to draw the blood from it? Was there not a queen in English history who sucked such a wound to draw poison from it?”

THE BUSINESS OF BUSINESS

Alias What?

“It is always awkward doing business with an alias.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE BLUE CARBUNCLE

American Business Principles

“Six thousand a year. That's paying for brains, you see- the American business principle. I learned that detail quite by chance. It's more than the Prime Minister gets. That gives you an idea of Moriarty's gains and of the scale on which he works. Another point: I made it my business to hunt down some of Moriarty's checks lately- just common innocent checks that he pays his household bills with. They were drawn on six different banks. Does that make any impression on your mind?”

Consulting

“They are mostly sent on by private inquiry agencies. They are all people who are in trouble about something and want a little enlightening. I listen to their story, they listen to my comments, and then I pocket my fee.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

Counter-intelligence Schemes

“They will at least show our people what is known and what is not. I may say that a good many of these papers have come through me, and I need not add are thoroughly untrustworthy. It would brighten my declining years to see a German cruiser navigating the Solent according to the mine-field plans which I have furnished.

-- HIS LAST BOW

Lesser of Two Evils

“Once or twice in my career I feel that I have done more real harm by my discovery of the criminal than ever he had done by his crime. I have learned caution now, and I had rather play tricks with the law of England than with my own conscience.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE ABBEY GRANGE

Making A Living on Theories

“Yes; I have a turn both for observation and for deduction. The theories which I have expressed there, and which appear to you to be so chimerical, are really extremely practical- so practical that I depend upon them for my bread and cheese.”

Money and Work

“There's money in this case, Watson, if there is nothing else.”

-- A SCANDAL IN BOHEMIA

Not Personal, Just Business

“Don't be hurt, my dear fellow. You know that I am quite impersonal.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE RETIRED COLOURMAN

Nut Crushing, Effective

“Because it is done by a man who cannot afford to fail, one whose whole unique position depends upon the fact that all he does must succeed. A great brain and a huge organization have been turned to the extinction of one man. It is crushing the nut with the triphammer- an absurd extravagance of energy- but the nut is very effectually crushed all the same.”

-- THE PROBLEM OF THOR BRIDGE

The Chief Executive Officer

He does little himself He only plans. But his agents are numerous and splendidly organized. Is there a crime to be done a paper to be abstracted, we will say, a house to be rifled, a man to be removed the word is passed to the professor, the matter is organized and carried out. The agent may be caught. In that case money is found for his bail or his defense. But the central power which uses the agent is never caught-never so much as suspected.

-- THE FINAL PROBLEM

THE WORLD, FLESH AND THE DEVIL

Beacons of the Future

“It is a very cheering thing to come into London by any of these lines which run high and allow you to look down upon the houses like this. Look at those big, isolated clumps of buildings rising above the slates, like brick islands in a lead-colored sea. . . Lighthouses, my boy! Beacons of the future! Capsules, with hundreds of bright little seeds in each, out of which will spring the wiser, better England of the future.”

Brain Diets

“The faculties become refined when you starve them. Why, surely you must admit that what your digestion gains in the way of blood supply is so much lost to the brain. I am a brain. The rest of me is a mere appendix. Therefore, it is the brain I must consider.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE MAZARIN STONE

Country Pleasures

“I’m sure, Watson, a week in the country will be invaluable to you. It is very pleasant to see the first green shoots upon the hedges and the catkins on the hazels once again. With a spud, a tin box, and an elementary book on botany, there are instructive days to be spent.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF WISTERIA LODGE

Country Refreshments

Watson, I think our quiet rest in the country has been a distinct success and I shall certainly return, much invigorated, to Baker Street to-morrow.

-- THE REIGATE PUZZLE

The Countryside, Horrors of

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE MAZARIN STONE

The Killing Fog

“Look out of this window, Watson. See how the figures loom up, are dimly seen, and then blend once more into the cloud-bank. The thief or the murderer could roam London on such a day as the tiger does the jungle, unseen until he pounces, and then evident only to his victim.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE DYING DETECTIVE

The Pastoral, Dark Side of ...

“The pressure of public opinion can do in the town what the law cannot accomplish. There is no lane so vile that the scream of a tortured child, or the thud of a drunkard's blow, does not beget sympathy and indignation among the neighbors, and then the whole machinery of justice is ever so close that a word of complaint can set it going, and there is but a step between the crime and the dock. But look at these lonely houses, each in its own fields, filled for the most part with poor ignorant folk who know little of the law. Think of the deeds of hellish cruelty, the hidden wickedness which may go on, year in, year out, in such places, and none the wiser.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE COPPER BEECHES

Personals in Newspapers

“Dear me, what a chorus of groans, cries, and bleatings! What a rag-bag of singular happenings! But surely the most valuable hunting-ground that ever was given to a student of the unusual!”

Places of Low Degree

“Had I been recognized in that den my life would not have been worth an hour's purchase; for I have used it before now for my own purposes, and the rascally lascar who runs it has sworn to have vengeance upon me. There is a trap-door at the back of that building, near the corner of Paul's Wharf, which could tell some strange tales of what has passed through it upon the moonless nights. We should be rich men if we had L1000 for every poor devil who has been done to death in that den. It is the vilest murder-trap on the whole riverside.”

-- A STUDY IN SCARLET

His Boswell

“Speaking of my old friend and biographer, I would take this opportunity to remark that if I burden myself with a companion in my various little inquiries it is not done out of sentiment or caprice, but it is that Watson has some remarkable characteristics of his own to which in his modesty he has given small attention amid his exaggerated estimates of my own performances. A confederate who foresees your conclusions and course of action is always dangerous, but one to whom each development comes as a perpetual surprise, and to whom the future is always a closed book, is indeed an ideal helpmate.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE BLANCHED SOLDIER

The Clue of Pencils

“Watson, I have always done you an injustice. There are others. What could this NN be? It is at the end of a word. You are aware that Johann Faber is the most common maker's name. Is it not clear that there is just as much of the pencil left as usually follows the Johann?”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE THREE STUDENTS

The Excitement of Readers

“I must admit, Watson, that you have some power of selection, which atones for much which I deplore in your narratives. Your fatal habit of looking at everything from the point of view of a story instead of as a scientific exercise has ruined what might have been an instructive and even classical series of demonstrations. You slur over work of the utmost finesse and delicacy, in order to dwell upon sensational details which may excite, but cannot possibly instruct, the reader.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE ABBEY GRANGE

Good Advice

“I have a respect for your brains, Baron, and the little which I have seen of your personality has not lessened it. Let me put it to you as man to man. No one wants to rake up your past and make you unduly uncomfortable. It is over, and you are now in smooth waters, but if you persist in this marriage you will raise up a swarm of powerful enemies who will never leave you alone until they have made England too hot to hold you. Is the game worth it? Surely you would be wiser if you left the lady alone. It would not be pleasant for you if these facts of your past were brought to her notice.’

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE BLUE CARBUNCLE

Order Out of Chaos

“A chaotic case, my dear Watson. It will not be possible for you to present it in that compact form which is dear to your heart. It covers two continents, concerns two groups of mysterious persons, and is further complicated by the highly respectable presence of our friend, Scott Eccles, whose inclusion shows me that the deceased Garcia had a scheming mind and a well-developed instinct of self-preservation. It is remarkable only for the fact that amid a perfect jungle of possibilities we, with our worthy collaborator, the inspector, have kept our close hold on the essentials and so been guided along the crooked and winding path. Is there any point which is not quite clear to you?”

Degradation

“If I claim full justice for my art, it is because it is an impersonal thing -- a thing beyond myself. Crime is common. Logic is rare. Therefore it is upon the logic rather than upon the crime that you should dwell. You have degraded what should have been a course of lectures into a series of tales.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE COPPER BEECHES

THE REASONER

Perfected Reason

“The ideal reasoner would, when he had once been shown a single fact in all its bearings, deduce from it not only all the chain of events which led up to it but also an the results which would follow from it. As Cuvier could correctly describe a whole animal by the contemplation of a single bone, so the observer who has thoroughly understood one link in a series of incidents should be able to accurately state all the other ones, both before and after. We have not yet grasped the results which the reason alone can attain to. Problems may be solved in the study which have baffled all those who have sought a solution by the aid of their senses. To carry the art, however, to its highest pitch, it is necessary that the reasoner should be able to utilize all the facts which have come to his knowledge; and this in itself implies, as you will readily see, a possession of all knowledge, which, even in these days of free education and encyclopedias, is a somewhat rare accomplishment. It is not so impossible, however, that a man should possess all knowledge which is likely to be to him in his work, and this I have endeavored in my case to do.”

-- THE ADVENTURE OF THE EMPTY HOUSE

Sifting the Sands of Surmise, Conjecture, and Hypothesis

“It is one of those cases where the art of the reasoner should be used rather for the sifting of details than for the acquiring of fresh evidence. The tragedy has been so uncommon, so complete, and of such personal importance to so many people that we are suffering from a plethora of surmise, conjecture, and hypothesis. The difficulty is to detach the framework of fact - of absolute undeniable fact from the embellishments of theorists and reporters. Then, having established ourselves upon this sound basis, it is our duty to see what inferences may be drawn and what are the special points upon which the whole mystery turns..”

Subject Into Object

“It is certainly delicate but I have not been struck up to now with its complexity. It has been a case for intellectual deduction, but when this original intellectual deduction is confirmed point by point by quite a number of independent incidents, then the subjective becomes objective and we can say confidently that we have reached our goal.”

For this reason I am not at the present moment telling you all that is in my mind. On the other hand, I said that I would play the game fairly by you, and I do not think it is a fair game to allow you for one unnecessary moment to waste your energies upon a profitless task. Therefore I am here to advise you this morning, and my advice to you is summed up in three words- abandon the case.”

Technical Writer And Tobacco

“Yes, I have been guilty of several monographs. They are all upon technical subjects. Here, for example, is one ‘Upon the Distinction between the Ashes of the Various Tobaccos.’ In it I enumerate a hundred and forty forms of cigar, cigarette, and pipe tobacco, with colored plates illustrating the difference in the ash. It is a point which is continually turning up in criminal trials, and which is sometimes of supreme importance as a clue. If you can say definitely, for example, that some murder had been done by a man who was smoking an Indian lunkah, it obviously narrows your field of search. To the trained eye there is as much difference between the black ash of a Trichinopoly and the white fluff of bird's-eye as there is between a cabbage and a potato.”

Playing the Percentages

“Winwood Reade is good upon the subject. He remarks that, while the individual man is an insoluble puzzle, in the aggregate he becomes a mathematical certainty. You can, for example, never foretell what any one man will do, but you can say with precision what an average number will be up to. Individuals vary, but percentages remain constant. So says the statistician.”

Playing Your Hand

“The shadow has departed and will not return. We must see what further cards we have in our hands and play them with decision. Could you swear to that man's face within the cab?”

Victorian Rock Climbing

“I stood up and examined the rocky wall behind me. In your picturesque account of the matter, which I read with great interest some months later, you assert that the wall was sheer. That was not literally true. A few small footholds presented themselves, and there was some indication of a ledge. The cliff is so high that to climb it all was an obvious impossibility, and it was equally impossible to make my way along the wet path without leaving some tracks. I might, it is true, have reversed my boots, as I have done on similar occasions, but the sight of three sets of tracks in one direction would certainly have suggested a deception. On the whole, then, it was best that I should risk the climb. It was not a pleasant business, The fall roared beneath me. I am not a fanciful person, but I give you my word that I seemed to hear Moriarty's voice screaming at me out of the abyss. A mistake would have been fatal. More than once, as tufts of grass came out in my hand or my foot slipped in the wet notches of the rock, I thought that I was gone. But I struggled upward, and at last I reached a ledge several feet deep and covered with soft green moss, where I could lie unseen, in the most perfect comfort. There I was stretched, when you, my dear Watson, and all your following were investigating in the most sympathetic and inefficient manner the circumstances of my death.”
